

BREADS & BAKES · SPINACH

Palak Roti

A soft, green, iron-rich roti kneaded with a garlicky spinach paste. Wholesome and just a little spicy from green chili, and it freezes beautifully — we press a whole week's worth at once. Eat it with any curry and ghee, or roll it into a wrap.

A BIG BATCH • PRESS A WEEK'S WORTH & FREEZE

WHAT YOU'LL NEED

FOR THE DOUGH

- atta (wheat flour), about 1 kg
- the palak paste (below), ~750 g
- extra atta / water, as needed to knead

FOR THE PALAK PASTE

- 2 big bunches spinach (palak), washed & cut
- 10–15 cloves garlic
- a bunch of green chilies
- a good bit of cumin (jeera)
- salt — don't forget it
- a little water, to help it grind

Amounts are by feel — scale the flour and paste together (roughly 750 g paste to 1 kg atta).

HOW WE MAKE IT

- 1 Make the paste. Blend the spinach, garlic, green chilies, cumin and salt with just a little water into a fine paste.
- 2 Bring the dough together. Put the atta (~1 kg) in a big bowl and add about 750 g of the paste. Mix.
- 3 Knead. Knead well (gundo) into a smooth dough ball, adding a little more atta or water as needed for your flour.
- 4 Portion. Divide into ~50 g balls.
- 5 Press. Press each ball between two parchment sheets (we use a tortilla press) into a roti. Repeat for the batch.
- 6 Freeze the extras. Stack with parchment between and freeze — a whole week's worth keeps beautifully.
- 7 Cook. Cook fresh or from frozen on a hot tava until cooked through with a few charred spots.
- 8 Serve. With curry and ghee, or roll it into a wrap.

Amma's note: we made ours a wrap with fried chicken, raita and fried green beans — delicious. Full of iron and fiber, a little spicy, and healthy either way you eat it.
